Pam's Notes

Good Tuesday Morning. Hoping you are well and enjoying the sunshine, if the weather is cooperating in your area.

I received great news from Darlene O'brien:
This is the note we sent to the kids so decided to forward it on. Didn't really know there were so many spots of cancer, so it is wonderful some have disappeared and all have shrunk. The chemo is working well, so will do 3 more sets and then a pet scan. Hopefully it will keep disappearing. Cathy is doing so well. She will have her next chemo next Tuesday with blood draws every Friday. Karol will fly home on Monday then John and I plan to travel to Texas next Saturday (my birthday) and Sunday. Spend a week or so there closing up the unit then head on to Illinois. Cathy is doing so well, that she can handle the chemo etc. by herself. If she does need someone, someone would come back on her second or third chemo. They are every 3 weeks. She will still have radiation when chemo is finished. Anyway, wanted to send this update. No more updates for a month anyway.

Cathy is going to work part time next week, then when she has her chemo she will take that day off. See how it all goes. Her boss is very nice at letting her work from home when necessary.

Hope all are well and enjoying the summer.

Love,
Darlene
Praise the Lord for His helping hand.

Wishing all a Happy Memorial Day....Please remember all those who have served their country for our freedom. Hats off to all our Veterans.
